

Nihonium was discovered by Japanese scientists and named after the Japanese name for Japan, Nihon.

Nihonium is the first element in the periodic table to be discovered in an Asian country.

Nihonium's longest-lived isotope has a half-life of about 10 seconds. It has no uses outside research.